AUCTION-ROOM THICKS.

District Attorney's Attention Called to Another Case.

Since the recent indictment of five auctioneers, who are accused of having conducted mock auctions, the District Attorney's office has received several letters complaining of other auctioneers. A letter received yesterday morning contained the following:

"There has not been a straight auction held at that place for years. The auctions are made up of furniture, crockery, etc., which can be seen at any time unloading direct from the factories in brand new boxes or crates. The goods are sold from a marked catalogue, and unless they bring a certain price they are knocked down to Mr. M. C. or Mr. J. R. or some other bogus bidder. A tall young man about 35 years old, with a light sandy mustache, wears the crowd, and comes forward as a bidder if there's any question. He seems to engineer things. Every catalogue sells during the auction has prices necessary to be realized, opposite each number. If you will stand close to him, you will see the pencil figures made all around the pages of the catalogue. One of his practices is to advertise the articles as the property of Mr. So-and-so, deceased. No richer field for your investigation can be found, as it reaches and affects all classes. I have attended the auctions for years, having an office in the immediate neighborhood, and this is the result of observation. Even a casual and superficial investigation by you will verify this statement. An investigation will be made."

MOTTO BUTTONS CALLED IN.

Father Ludeke Takes Them from Parochial School Children.

Many of the boys and girls who attend the parochial school of St. Vincent de Paul's Church, in North Sixth street, Williamsburgh, of which the Rev. Martin Carroll is the rector, have been wearing motto and campaign buttons. On last Thursday the Rev. Father Francis Ludeke, an assistant rector, while talking to a nine-year-old pupil, saw that the motto button which the boy was wearing bore a vulgar inscription. When the pupils were assembled in their classroom on Friday morning Father Ludeke told them that each one must step forward and give up the motto buttons. Some of the scholars surrendered campaign buttons. The buttons were burned.

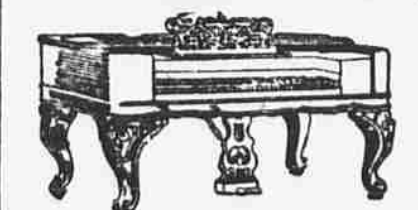

Father Ludeke yesterday explained his action: "These motto buttons," said the priest, "have played havoc among the children. They neglected their lessons and thought of nothing but buttons. I took them away to preserve better order, but principally on account of the disgusting inscriptions on some of them. The law ought to put the makers of these buttons in prison. I returned to the boys and girls the campaign buttons they were wearing because I do not believe in taking partition out of children."

ENJOYED BY A PARTNER.

Hinck & Ould Forbidden to Pay Out Dry Goods Merchants of 53 and 55 Worth street.

Hinck & Ould, commission woolens and dry goods merchants of 53 and 55 Worth street, have been in liquidation for the past six months, Henry J. Hinck having charge of winding up the business. John G. Ercken, who was a partner in the firm, is discredited, and has obtained an injunction restraining his partners from disposing of the assets of the firm for the benefit of certain persons, seven in number, or for any purpose other than the liquidation of the business of the firm. Mr. Ercken became a partner on Jan. 1, 1894, putting in $100,000 cash capital against the same amount of assets of the business. The firm suffered, he said, large losses, which up to Aug. 21 amounted to $13,972, and he maintains that Hinck & Ould by their losses and their withdrawal have exhausted their share of the capital, while his share amounts to $42,000. Mr. Ercken asserts that Mr. Hinck has withdrawn $50,000 to pay off the old firm and threatens to pay off $50,000 more of similar debts.

This Box as Nasty as Home Men.

From the Argentine Republic.

At Williams is a dog, a beautiful mild-eyed and gentle spaniel, the property of "Capt. Adams, who has acquired the tobacco habit. He has no other vice, but following meals he smokes, as does an old smoker, for nicotine. He knows the tobacco habit for years, and the master's saloon, and will follow them persistently till a piece of tobacco is given him. This he will lie down and lick the tobacco held between his paws till the piece is entirely consumed. "Boss," as he is called, has been a victim of the tobacco habit for years, and the dark hair upon his forehead is discolored in the same manner as is the mustache of a cigarette smoker.

Fulton and Duffield Streets, Brooklyn.

Amidst the Mushroom Growth of Bargain Sales

And with a veritable epidemic of humbuggery spreading in many quarters, an appeal to reason and common sense will no doubt be greeted by the majority of people with a sigh of relief.—The advertisements of well known and respected dry goods houses on both sides of the river have of late treated the reader to a good bit of amusement that the serious advertiser never meant to put in.—The most preposterous and impossible claims culminating in a concert of propositions to "sell goods lower than any other house in the country" have, of course, settled nothing but the indisputable fact that one store can give away whiskbrooms, while another can sell lard soap and still another tin kettles or such "at the lowest price in the country"—for an hour or a day.

On This Occasion We Beg to Submit to the thoughtful shopper our idea of merchandising, for it may be just what economical people are after.—We invest in a class of merchandise which is absolutely reliable, will prove satisfactory to the purchaser, in turn give us profit and maintain our reputation.—We build every department in the store on a foundation of adamant excellence, and offer none but the best brands which have already achieved supremacy, and can be sold with a positive guarantee of their goodness.—Our prices will be found right in every instance.—

We Propose to Hold a Series of Special Sales on a Grand Scale, which will prove a source of genuine economy to the buying public.—

The Corset is the foundation on which largely depends the success of a lady's costume. Therefore a visit to our exhibition of the different makes will surely interest those who wish to secure a Corset best adapted to their figure and to have the advice of an expert in this important branch always by the firm.
